

Website helps Texas businesses recruit interns

<http://woodlandsonline.com/npps/story.cfm?nppage=46675>

March 19, 2012

Published 03/19/1012 | By Bryan Shettig

AUSTIN — Texas businesses have a new way to recruit talent from the next generation of workers thanks to an online tool offered by the Texas Workforce Commission in collaboration with the nonprofit employer group DirectEmployers Association (DE).

TexasInternship.jobs provides employers with a simple, no-cost way to advertise their available internship positions.

“Texas offers great economic opportunities to young adults just starting out in their careers,” Gov. Rick Perry said. “This new resource is the latest of our many efforts to prepare our future workforce for competition in the global marketplace.”

TexasInternship.jobs is the latest enhancement to TWC’s arsenal of free online job resources linked to its comprehensive job-matching website WorkInTexas.com.

“Offering real-world work experience is the best way to identify, train and prepare the leaders of the future workforce,” said TWC Chairman Tom Pauken. “We are pleased to be able to help employers find good trainees by providing this free resource.”